Increase in the maximum asset allocation range for alternative assets

ANZ Wealth's investment research team regularly reviews the strategic asset allocation of its funds. Following a recent review an increase in the maximum asset allocation range for alternative assets will be implemented 1 October 2014.

The increase in the maximum asset allocation range for alternative assets will provide an enhanced ability to add value to the Funds' portfolio through the active asset allocation process, and will also improve portfolio management efficiency. Active asset allocation is the process of increasing or decreasing exposure to relevant asset classes within permitted strategic asset allocation ranges.

Alternative assets include a broad range of investments outside the traditional investment areas of shares, bonds and listed property, and may include direct property, private equity, infrastructure and hedge funds.

The revised range for alternative assets for each of the Funds is outlined in the tables following. The increase in the alternative asset allocation range will not change the Funds' investment strategy, investment objective or level of investment risk.

Please note that there are no changes to other asset class ranges, and no changes to any benchmark allocations at this time.
